Wilberforce library making progress

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

Highlands East council is making important decisions about the Wilberforce library, including hosting a public meeting in September to deal with ongoing privacy concerns.

At their July 25 meeting, members of council were given an update on the library's construction by Deputy-reeve Suzanne Partridge, who sits on the library sub-committee.

Being built by students enrolled in Fleming College's sustainable building design and construction program, the facility will include environmental features, such as strawbale walls.

Partridge told council it was suggested by the construction students that a section of the library's exterior be done with a lime whitewash, leaving potential for a community mural in the future.

Councillors thought this was a great idea.

Partridge told councillors they should start thinking about whether to put a fence or shrubbery around the property, offering adjoining lot owners some privacy.

"We want to get the adjoining lot owners involved," she said. "Maybe have a meeting."

Concerns were expressed by neighbouring landowners earlier this year following clear-cutting on the library's property.

Clerk Irene Cook said letters could be sent out to nearby landowners notifying them of a public meeting.

Environment supervisor Glen Covert suggested the municipality draw up some mock-ups, with possible fence and shrub options, and present them at the meeting.

Reeve Dave Burton suggested asking Pat Marcotte, the designer of the library, to draw up some options.

Councillors agreed to this and suggested hosting the meeting in September, possibly at the library.

Partridge recommended hosting it in the evening, making it more accessible to members of the public.

Construction of the library started this past April and is expected to be complete by the fall.

Victoria Street School to go to Community Living

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

The municipality of Dysart is buying the former Victoria Street School with the intention of selling it to local organization Community Living Haliburton County.

At their July 22 meeting, council executed a bylaw to purchase the property located at 73 Victoria St. from the Trillium Lakelands District School Board for $235,000.

A similar bylaw was passed authorizing the sale of the school and property to Community Living for $245,000.

Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey told members of council it was being sold with the condition that if Community Living ever wanted to sell it the municipality would have the first right of refusal.

While the deal has been in negotiations with TLDSB for some time, Fearrey said the municipality was working out some environmental issues with the building before proceeding with the purchase.

"We were able to partner with the school board and do the necessary studies to satisfy everyone," Fearrey told the paper.

The reeve believes the decision by the municipality to purchase the school is a positive one and something the community wanted.

"Community Living is an important part of our community," said Fearrey. "We need to make sure we look after them."

An organization aimed at providing an inclusive community for those with intellectual disabilities, Community Living plans to move its administrative offices, community participation staff offices and program space to the school once purchased, executive director Teresa Jordan

Angelica Blenich Staff

The Victoria Street School has housed all sorts of community organizations. It will soon have new occupants as Community Living moves in.

told the paper.

"This will only use a fraction of the space," she said. "We will be looking for partners to share space, both full-time as offices and in creating community space that can be used for meetings and gatherings by many groups." Community Living board members also hope of one day having a community green space in the large yard around the school, said Jordan.

At this point no significant changes are planned for the building, other than necessary upgrades such as window replacement and minor renovations.

"We plan to host a town hall style meeting in the fall to seek input and ideas from the community and neighbourhood, with the goal of meaningful partnerships and usable space," said Jordan.

The organization is currently using a former residential building as office space and will revert it back to apartment units, said Jordan.

The school board declared the former school a surplus building in April 2012. It has been unoccupied since last July.

Local food banks applaud PC amendment

Jenn Watt
Editor

An amendment to the Local Food Act, giving farmers a tax credit for produce donated to food banks, has the blessing of area advocates.

"We feel it would be a tremendous help if they [farmers] could claim that," said Minden Food Bank board chairwoman Barbara Walford-Davis.

"When the season's over and [produce] is not sold, they're just plowing it under into the ground."

The PC party's amendment specifies that farmers who donate extra food would receive a tax credit worth 25 per cent of the wholesale value of the produce.

According to a release from Haliburton-Kawartha Lakes-Brock MPP Laurie Scott, "more than 25 million pounds of fresh, nutritious food" is disposed of or plowed back into farmers' fields across Ontario every year.

"[M]any Ontarians struggle to put food on their tables and need to look to their local food bank for assistance. This is a simple thing we can do that will make a big difference to those families," Scott said in the release.

The Minden Food Bank has 273 families registered, of which about 80 per cent access the resources monthly, the chairwoman said.

The organization already receives fresh food from residents' gardens, with a substantial amount coming from Gelert resident John Teljeur's property.

Teljeur is responsible for the "Food Crusade," which includes harvesting veggies from his garden for the food bank.

Recently, Teljeur has become more involved with food banks, joining the Ontario Association of Food Banks board.

"We haven't had a meeting since [the amendment] has been announced, but there has been all kinds of communication back and forth between the board members and the organization itself," he said.

Teljeur applauded the move by the Opposition party, but said much of the food that comes in across the province will be coming from larger commercial farms in the south.

While there may be some farmers who generate enough produce in Haliburton County to contribute, farmers' market chairwoman Angel Taylor said most won't have anything substantial to give.

"This proposed amendment may be marginally beneficial at only 25 per cent of wholesale prices to large scale farmers who sell to middle persons and brokers, but is unlikely to benefit very small scale farmers and growers such as we have in Haliburton County," she wrote in an email to the paper.

Taylor and her husband operate a small farm in Blairhampton and don't see the benefit to their own pocketbooks.

"Having excess produce tends not to be an issue. Furthermore, many crops that would otherwise get 'plowed under' have very short shelf life. The amendment presumes that food banks will have refrigeration and that produce can be gotten to them quickly. Are these realistic and reasonable assumptions?" she said.

In Haliburton County, capacity is limited.

While Minden's food bank has refrigerators and freezers, the 4Cs in Haliburton is unable to handle more than a few veggies here and there.

In Wilberforce, the food bank doesn't have a permanent location any longer and Cardiff can't take too much, either.

Judy MacDuff of the 4Cs said she could take vegetables from farmers if they were dropped off the same day the food bank was open.

"We don't have a refrigerator to keep them in and we don't have room," she said.

"It would all depend on when they could bring it and whether it would keep or not," she said.

The 4Cs focuses on giving out packaged food that keeps for longer and tells clients to use the money they have on fresh food. They also distribute the Good Food Box, which has produce at cheaper prices.

The 4Cs had 92 households access its food supply in June.

While there is a freezer, it is used mostly to store hamburger, MacDuff said.

Teljeur doesn't see the capacity issue being an impenetrable obstacle.

He acknowledges it's a problem, but said if measures such as the PC amendment come to pass, food banks will adjust.

The community kitchen program run by SIRCH Community Services could also take a lot of the food donated, he said.

"If you could co-ordinate volunteers ... the produce could be made into meals right away," he said.

"I think the biggest point is we have the opportunity to get this food."

At this point, the amendment is just that - an amendment. It has not yet passed into law.

The PC party has also announced an amendment to make food education mandatory in schools.

Geoff & Lise Ainsley of Koshlong Marine are pleased to announce that as of August 1st, Pat & Katrina Bradley will be taking over the operations of Koshlong Marine.

Fresh ideas

A PC AMENDMENT TO the Local Food Act has exposed a few cracks in our social support system.

The revision to the Liberal legislation, if passed, would give farmers a 25 per cent tax credit on the wholesale value of produce they donate to food banks.

As one local small-scale farmer put it, it's as wholesome and feel-good as "motherhood and apple pie."

But that farmer, Angel Taylor, said we might do well to look a little deeper.

She wondered: can our food banks handle the produce? Do our farmers have much extra to give?

Turns out, only the Minden Food Bank can really take large volumes of fresh fruits and veggies. Haliburton's 4Cs doesn't have the room, Wilberforce doesn't even have a permanent location and Cardiff also can't take very much.

It's a challenge greater than the Tory amendment supposes.

While our neighbours to the south have large-scale farms and large-scale food banks, in Haliburton County, everything is much smaller.

The tax rebate might not have the desired effect.

But beyond that, is the question of whether we want to improve our facilities in that way.

Certainly, our primary goal should be reducing – ideally eliminating – poverty and the need for food banks.

In the meantime, however, demand continues to rise. More than 200 families are receiving food from the Minden facility and nearly 100 in Haliburton.

The 4Cs treasurer Judy MacDuff noted a strange change in numbers last month when eight new families came to the food bank.

Normally, June is a time when most families can find work and a slower time for the institution.

Given the increasing demand and increasing understanding of the importance of fresh produce for the health of all people, shouldn't our food banks and other social services organizations be prepared to take donated produce?

This isn't a knock against what exists now and the dedicated staff, board members and volunteers at each of the four food banks (not to mention the community kitchen program and Good Food Box program).

But as we move forward as a community, we should be looking at ways to store and distribute donated fresh food.

It's not only farmers with extra produce to contribute, but also avid gardeners who want to lend a hand and a bushel of carrots.

When we envision the future of our local social supports, finding better ways to get nutritious, healthful foods to the people who need them should be our priority.

An upward spiral

LATELY I HAVE been finding myself reading about and engaged in conversations about a common theme – that everyone has a story – and when we take the time to listen, the story can serve a purpose in our own lives. Not monumental in and of itself, but running into this time and again over the past few weeks I get the sense that this facet of humanity is one that can often be overlooked, yet the opportunity is always present.

Speaking with a colleague we were reviewing the experiences of some of our newest "recruits" at SIRCH. How one recruit stated that helping a specific family actually was a privilege and once she knew the family's story she felt honoured to be making a difference in their lives. I believe that when we take the time to hear another person's story we innately connect. Prior to hearing those stories, it is all too easy for us to allow our inner critic to take over. Our inner "critic" makes a judgment about another person's life – the seemingly unhappy waiter/waitress, the person in the vehicle ahead of you who is making unsafe driving choices. And when we allow that, we are making a choice to disconnect from them, to assume we know what is happening in their lives. Oftentimes we are wrong when we approach another human being from this perspective.

It only takes a moment of our time to flip our thought processes, to slow down and to choose our attitude. Simply put, we never know what is happening in the lives of others until we purposefully take the time to listen, to ask "how are you" and to hear the story.

And when you see the good in people it becomes easier to motivate yourself to be of service to them and being of service to other people, by giving them value you make their lives better. Over time you tend to get what you give. And the people you help may feel more inclined to help other people. And so you, together, create an upward spiral of positive change that grows and becomes stronger.

My tomatoes

IF I HAVE learned anything over the years – and by that I mean this summer – it is that you should never turn to dinner guests and proclaim, “Let’s have a bit more wine, then I’ll show you my tomatoes.”

This is just one of the disclaimers that isn’t, but should be, placed on tomato plants you buy from the nursery. There is a right way and wrong way to present this, by the way.

The right way entails taking them out to the garden area first. The wrong way entails fiddling with your shirt buttons and puffing your chest out as you say it.

I only mention this because as one of Haliburton County’s premier tomato growers, I am proud of my potted tomato plant.

While I’m not overly attached to it, I will say that through my nurturing and hard work, Thomas has grown from a tall three-foot plant to a tall three-foot plant with 15 tomatoes ripening on it.

Believe it or not, I have never been, a gardener prior to this – and in fact have no talent for it.

But I do have a talent for bad financial planning, which made this an ideal investment for me. You see, the plant itself, which was fully grown with tomatoes ready to show themselves cost me $15. Right now, however, tomatoes are certainly less than a dollar apiece, so like all my investments this one has tanked spectacularly.

That means I find myself hoping, as I always do, that my investment will turn around.

I’m, in fact, praying that the price of tomatoes skyrockets in the near future and stays high until I have consumed every one on that plant. That way I can hold my head up high and say to people standing around the tomato bin at the supermarket, “I saw this crazy spike in tomato prices coming, so I grew my own.”

Then, I will not feel nearly as stupid as I do now.

The odds are fairly slim though.

I figure my plant will pay for itself and my labour the minute tomatoes cost about $2 apiece, which I am told is unlikely to happen in summer since it is the peak of tomato season.

Which leads me to the other disclaimer that should be placed on every tomato plant: “Why are you buying this? Your friends, who are good at gardening, will give you some. And, if they don’t, they are cheaper at the grocery store or farmers’ market!”

If that had been posted onto my plant, I’m almost positive I would have spent my $15 elsewhere and spent a lot less time talking to a tomato plant – something that neither Thomas nor I have enjoyed. In fact, we haven’t spoken for several days now after our last argument. And, unless he apologizes, he’s dead to me.

I guess what I am trying to say is that I am not cut out for gardening – or speculating on tomato futures.

I’ve also learned that trying to show off your tomatoes to dinner guests or anyone else is the modern day equivalent of the question, “Hey, does anyone want to see a slideshow of our family vacation?”

They might say yes, but they’ll never come back.

On the plus side, things could have been much worse. I could have tried to grow a big zucchini.

Fort Irwin, Haliburton Lake, 1953. Harold Black came from Owen Sound as a young man to teach school at Eagle Lake. He and his wife, Ogla Pritchard, started operating the Eagle Lake Store. Later he and Russell Dart of Haliburton formed a partnership for the store business. Russell had been a partner with George Earl (Earl and Dart Store) in Haliburton. Russell and Harold called their store Darlack Department Store and during the early 1950s they built a store in Fort Irwin on Haliburton Lake as seen in this photo. When they dissolved their partnership, Russell took over the store and ran it successfully for years. He sold everything from groceries to building and hardware supplies. The store had an excellent meat department (Moss Robertson) and a laundromat. In this picture the building to the left was a restaurant owned and operated by the Skitches from Peterborough. Harold continued to own and operate the HJ Black Hardware store in Haliburton until his death in 1963. Submitted by Tom Hodgson, Oshawa

Thank you for speaking out

To the Editor,

I read with great interest the article on restricting Hydro’s use of Garlon RTU on Redstone Lake.

I have a cousin who suffers from sarcoidosis. She first contracted this disease while at the cottage on Minden Lake just below the white water kayaking area.

The first time she showed symptoms to this mysterious disease, Hydro had just sprayed under the high tension wires that surround their access route into the cottage. Bethel Church Road to be exact.

Her symptoms affect her eyes and heart.

She cannot drive after daylight and has had many episodes thought to be TIAs, which actually turned out to be further effects of sarcoidosis.

She has been incapacitated for many years now and even though she has had laser surgery on her eyes, will ultimately go blind, not to mention the constant pain and issues with the heart.

I know of another person with sarcoidosis, a farmer. He lives in the Gananoque area. His symptoms affect his stomach. His farm has high tension lines crossing it.

Coincidence? I think not.

Thank you to the Redstone Lake Cottage Association for speaking out.

Lifelong friends fulfill lifelong dream

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

It's a recipe made with their three favourite things: cottaging, camping and cooking.

Lina Spencer and Nayla Zalzal have been close friends for the past 25 years, ever since they met on an airplane during Spencer's honeymoon.

Since that fateful meeting the friends have spent many summers together with their families enjoying cottaging in the Haliburton Highlands for the past 20 years.

With a shared passion for cooking, Zalzal and Spencer always tossed the idea around of writing their own cookbook.

This year the pair released The Cottage Gourmet, a cookbook put together with their favourite cottage recipes and photographs from all over Ontario.

On Aug. 3 the duo will be signing copies of their book at the Food Hub at Abbey Gardens, where it is for sale.

"We'd go camping and bring up food and make it and the kids and our husbands and friends would say wow, you guys should really write a cookbook," said Spencer. "There's a trick to cooking for camping and how much you can bring up."

The pair began putting pen to paper about three years ago and realized they had collected a number of photographs over the years from their time spent north.

"We thought who's going to do our food photography?" said Spencer. "So we did that too."

Once they compiled their recipes and photos, Zalzal and Spencer took their material to a graphic designer in Burlington, who highlighted the cottage country element in a coffee table book style.

"A lot of people like cottagers are so attached to cottage country. A lot of our pictures, they'll say well that's my cottage road ... they imagine that it's theirs and that's what we want," said Spencer.

The two find similarities in their style of cooking, which revolves around the Mediterranean diet.

While Spencer is originally from Italy, Zalzal comes from Egypt, both countries which incorporate a lot of olive oil, oregano and lemon.

With full-time careers as a general practitioner and tax specialist with the Ministry of Finance, Zalzal and Spencer turn to cooking to unleash their creativity.

"We're like a ballet in the kitchen, we know where each person belongs when and it's a lot of fun," said Zalzal.

Spencer believes there are many tricks to keep in mind when cooking for your family and guests at the cottage, such as keeping ingredients to a minimum.

"Another trick is starting something from something that is store bought," said Spencer. "We have a crab dip that is basically an Asiago and artichoke dip that you add a few more ingredients to it and you have a delicious crab dip."

Preparing food ahead of time or keeping recipes to a minimum means less time spent in the kitchen and more time spent outdoors.

The book is divided into four sections, breakfast, lunch, dinner and dessert.

One of Spencer's favourite recipes featured in the book is the Nutella-stuffed French toast, which is a crowd pleaser, she said.

A cottager on Blue Hawk Lake, Zalzal's favourite recipe from the book is a lobster dip.

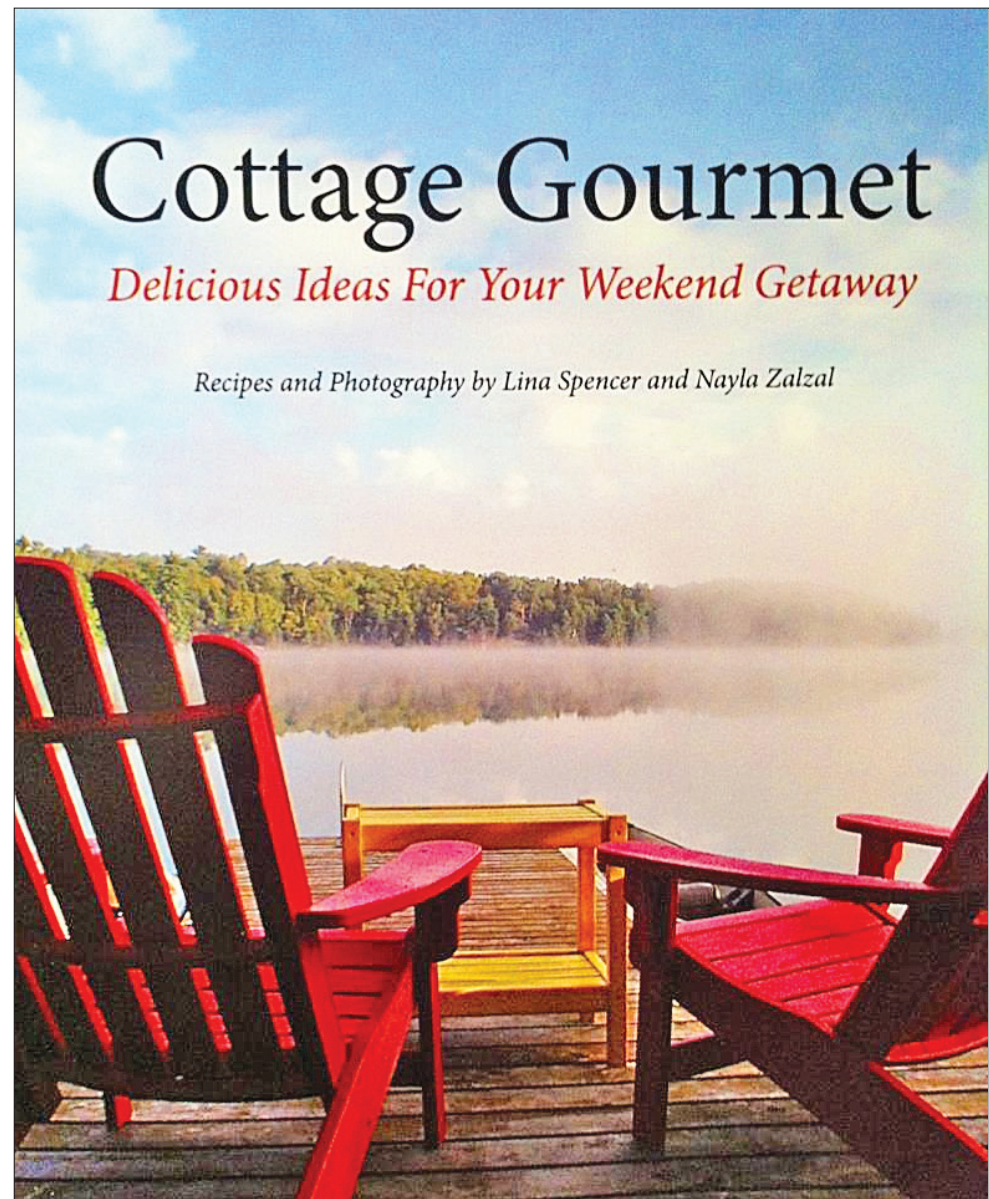

"They [recipes] taste better up here," said Spencer.

Most of the recipes in the book start as experiments or variations of other dishes they experience.

The pair got connected with Abbey Gardens through board member Heather Chambers, who approached them about the idea of selling the book.

Zalzal dreams of writing more cookbooks in the future with her friend, perhaps even doing a series.

"Nayla keeps saying this is our dream and it really is," said Spencer. "We just want to share our love of cottaging and of food. It's just so important to enjoy good food up here."

Haliburton cottagers Lina Spencer and Nayla Zalzal have recently published a book filled with their favourite recipes and photographs from the cottage, titled The Cottage Gourmet. The pair will be signing copies of their book on Aug. 3 at the Food Hub at Abbey Gardens in West Guilford. /Photo submitted

The book signing will take place from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Food Hub on Aug. 3.

A small price to pay for new customers

To the Editor,

The recent letter complaint in the Echo by a cottage owner about the apparent lack of unmotivated local workers was totally misguided and really only the misinformed opinion of just one person.

However, as a seasonal resident, I have noticed one frustrating practice of the local labour market and that is the reluctance of many to return phone calls with a non-705 area code.

The reality is that land lines are going out of existence and very few seasonal residents ever had one and in any case now almost all of them have cellphones with numbers based on their primary out-of-county residence.

When a seasonal resident while in the county leaves a message, it is most likely to be with a return number outside the 705 code area.

Many local contractors and businesses are hesitant to incur long distance charges in returning the call.

In recent weeks, my wife called three businesses, none of whom returned the call, two of whom later admitted, after my wife had to call those two a second time, that the area code was a factor. We never heard back from the third and now don't care to.

Such long distances costs nowadays are relatively minor and in any case have always been a deductible business expense.

It is really a small price to pay for new customers.

Ministry funds new recreation project

Angelica Blenich

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the July 22 meeting of Dysart et al council.

The municipality is receiving a $72,000 grant from the Ministry of Tourism, Culture and Sport.

The funding is coming from the province's Sport and Recreation Communities Fund and will be used for a two-year initiative that will include various community groups, said Dysart's chief administrative officer Tamara Wilbee.

Focused on recreation, the pilot project will include Point in Time Centre for Children, Youth and Parents, the Dysart branch of the library, the Aging Well Committee of Haliburton and other partners, said Wilbee.

A part-time project co-ordinator will be hired to oversee the project, which will become more defined following a July 30 meeting between participating groups.

"Once hired the manager will do an asset resource inventory," said Wilbee.

The initiative will include an after-school and summer program, a library loan program which will include sports equipment and improvements made to recreation facilities at Head Lake Park, said Wilbee.

"We're going to be doing some Try It festivals, basically where kids can come out with their friends and have the opportunity to try different sports," said the CAO.

Free WiFi at Head Lake Park

Those looking for Internet in Haliburton Village need look no further than the green space in the middle of town.

Wireless Internet is now available in Head Lake Park, extending from the library up to the cenotaph on Highland Street, said Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey.

"It should be up and running by today," said Fearrey last week.

The Internet installation and services were funded by the municipality as well as the Haliburton County Development Corporation.

New website for museum

What's old is new again.

The Haliburton Highlands Museum is undergoing a transformation as it prepares to launch a new website.

Recently appointed museum director Kate Butler has been overseeing the redesign of the website for the past few months and gave council members a sneak peek at what to expect.

"The old website looked outdated," said Butler.

A revamped page includes heritage photos and an up-to-date list of upcoming events.

"The website won't be stagnant," she said.

Changes people can expect to see include a blog written by the director herself and merchandise available for purchase online, including books and apparel.

Butler said she is in the midst of setting up a PayPal account for the site.

"People will also be able to donate online to the museum."

The new site is in the final stages of editing with the director hoping to launch it in the next week.

The website domain will remain the same and is www.haliburtonhighlandsmuseum.com.

Farmers' market extends season, changes hours

After a strong start the Haliburton farmers' market will be extending its season to run until Tuesday, Oct. 8.

The decision was made by the vendors and the Haliburton County Farmers' Market Association board members, said chairwoman Angel Taylor in a letter to council.

Located at Head Lake Park, the market runs on Tuesdays in Haliburton and on Fridays in Carnarvon.

Originally held on Tuesdays from 1 to 5 p.m., the market has shifted its hours for the duration of the year, now from 12 to 4 p.m.

The Carnarvon hours will stay the same.

"We are receiving very positive feedback about the market from vendors and customers and thank you for your assistance," said Taylor in her letter.

MNR jobs will remain in county, Dysart reeve says

"The relocation of the headquarters to the Haliburton/Stanhope airport ushers in really a new chapter. I know you realize we're all really excited about it and we're looking really forward to it," Moffatt said. "It also galvanizes the existing relationship that Algonquin Highlands has and has had for many years with the Ministry of Natural Resources. The relocation project has been widely embraced by the community and this is the first step to what we know will be sensible and viable development of the airport lands." The finalization of details will be discussed at a special council meeting July 30. Negotiations with the province continue, but Moffatt has been assured the conclusion is "imminent."

"There's no question in my mind nor in the minister's mind that we will be in construction this year," Dickson said.

The discussion points at the council meeting will include rescinding the resolution for a 4,000 foot runway; a scope change application for the Building Canada Fund, the hiring of a project manager, who will be responsible for the MNR base and all of the work on the airport, construction of a new roadway from the new entrance that will be relocated farther down the Stanhope Airport Road on the right; finalization of the HCDC partially funded Land Use and Development Plan for other ideas for sustainable development on this land and finalizing earthworks to prepare for the MNR footprint.

The construction is expected to start this year and is projected to be completed spring 2015.

It will replace the current building in Haliburton that was originally designed for six staff members in 1950. At its busiest, the facility is used by as many as 56 staff members between April and Oct. 31. When there is a staff meeting it is held in the parking lot.

Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey is happy about the announcement and for Algonquin Highlands.

"Any time we can keep jobs in Haliburton County when the potential of them leaving is about to happen is a good thing," he said.

He adds the move of the headquarters from Haliburton to Stanhope opens up opportunities.

"There's a nice piece of property there. I'm positive that we can make some kind of investment to turn it around for our community. It's all good," he said.

With a customer waiting list for hangars, the project includes nine to 14 more hangars to not only meet this demand, but meet future demands. There will be 16 hangars removed during the process to make way for the headquarters.

Moffatt added the footprint for the plans to the 4,000-foot runway will be untouched. This allows for the possibility of a future development. There will be six hectares of trees cleared for this project, Moffatt said.

She welcomed the public's input.

A joint open house between the township and the MNR will be held later this year.

Moffatt said when she and her council took control close to three years ago the ministry called about the possibility of this project.

"We look forward to a long and healthy relationship with the MNR and this is good news not only for Algonquin Highlands, but for all of Haliburton County," she said.

The MNR currently works from Haliburton and a portable at the Haliburton/Stanhope airport.

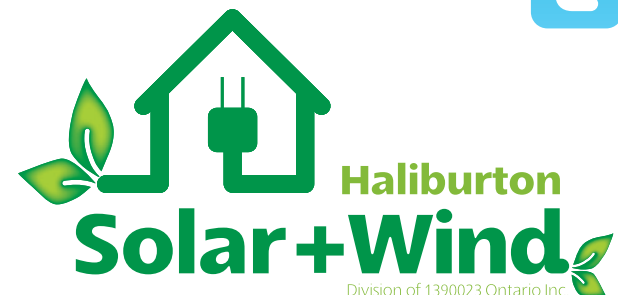

Chris Cuthbertson, MNR fire management supervisor, said this project will make operations more efficient and staff will be better served, all in one location.

"We've outgrown our current facility," he said. "We will be centralized and a lot more efficient."

This is part of $47 million that will help with the renovation and rebuilding of three other fire response facilities in the province that provide forest fire response to close to 90 million hectares of Crown land. Two other announcement events were held simultaneously.

More than a thousand wildfires are suppressed every year with the help of 750 fire rangers and more than 300 private sector firefighters.

Bylaw officer looks for dog's owners

Nate Smelle
Special to the Echo

Over the last two weeks, bylaw enforcement officer for Highlands East Wayne Galloway has been chasing down 11 dogs found running loose between Harcourt and Gooderham. So far, eight animals have been accounted for. While six of the dogs have been captured and relocated to the Bancroft Municipal Pound on Monck Road, three are still on the loose. One of the dogs was found along the roadside apparently hit by a car and killed; another was reported to have been picked up by two unknown individuals.

"I haven't seen one as bad as this in a long time," said Galloway.

"If you are going to buy an animal from a backyard breeder this is what the animals often go through. Some uncaring individual just wanted to get rid of these poor dogs."

According to Galloway some of the animals are so badly matted that they cannot go to the bathroom. He explained that if the animals had not been rescued, the ones neglected to the point that their matted coats were preventing them from urinating and defecating properly would have died a very slow and painful death as the excrement backed up into their system.

"There is no need to dispose of the animals the way that they did," Galloway said.

"Take them to the Humane Society. Take them to an animal shelter. Take them to the dog pound. You can put them on the Internet and find someone who wants to care for them. You don't need to dump them off in the middle of nowhere and just hope that they survive."

All but two of the dogs are a bichon-poodle-shi tzu cross. The other two are a terrier-chihuahua cross. Some of the more badly neglected dogs were taken to Critters Comforts and Clips where owner/operator Dista Goguen along with the help of her staff worked away to reveal the beautiful animal beneath the filth.

"This is the worst case of neglect I have seen 20 years," said Goguen.

"The animals were caked in urine, feces and mud worse than I have ever seen."

Along with donating her time grooming the animals Goguen has also given $100 of food and supplies to help with the extended care of the abandoned animals.

Multiple pounds are now looking for the owners of these dogs, however, according to Galloway the dogs could be from anywhere.

"I am sure that there are lots of people that would love to have these dogs," said Galloway.

If you have any information regarding these dogs, or if you would like more information on how you can adopt rescued animals call the Bancroft Municipal Pound at 613-332-2755.

50th festival has finds for all

Angelica Blenich
Staff reporter

The annual Arts and Crafts Festival held in Head Lake Park was a celebratory occasion for all, as it drew thousands to Haliburton Village from July 26 to 28.

For three days, artisans from all over the country set-up their items for display at the park, with visitors perusing everything from pottery and jewelry to felted vegetables and birdhouses.

This year marks the 50th anniversary of the festival as well as the Rails End Gallery, formerly known as the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts.

The milestone achievement will be celebrated with the Golden Gala Garden Party on Sept. 15.

Held in Head Lake Park, the 1930s-esque event will include entertainment, champagne, refreshments and more.

For more information on how to purchase tickets to the party visit www.railsendgallery.com or call 705-457-2330.

Ron Tremback demonstrates how he makes art out of wood at his booth, Solar Woodcuts during the annual Arts and Crafts Festival on July 28.

Art of all media was available to peruse at the annual Arts and Crafts Festival on July 26, 27 and 28 in Head Lake Park. Artisans from across the country brought their pottery, jewelry, stained glass, fabric arts, wood carvings, clothing, and more to the Highlands.

Held from July 26 to 28, the outdoor collection of artisans drew in vendors from all over Ontario and thousands of visitors over a three day period.

Homemade soaps of all kinds, such as licorice, mango papaya and oatmeal and honey were up for grabs at the festival. The natural soaps were made by Skinlicious soaps.

Decorative felted art was a new addition to this year's Arts and Crafts Festival, made by artist Sarah Gaby-Trotz, a former student of the Haliburton School of the Arts. Gaby-Trotz of Wishing Tree Felt creates unique items out of felt including these carrots and wearable art such as necklaces.

Seed savers gather for first workshop

Jenn Watt
Editor

For two hours Thursday evening, a group of gardeners diligently picked, plucked, shook and smacked seeds out of their pods at the Dysart branch of the public library.

Part of the seed saving series of workshops conducted by Haliburton In Transition (HINT), participants at all levels of gardening expertise learned how to save seeds to grow year after year.

Saving, rather than buying, seeds is cost-effective, allows gardeners to choose plants that are well-adapted to the local environment and can protect heirloom varieties.

Heirloom seeds are those not commonly distributed by big seed companies and have value to farmers, particularly the ones that are adapted to local climates.

"We actually play a really important role," workshop facilitator Carolyn Langdon said.

"If that plant material goes extinct, we'll never get them back again."

The group was advised on all aspects of seed saving, including selecting the right plant to save from, when the best time to harvest the seeds is and how long to keep them before planting again.

Participants brought in plants to gather seeds from and by the end of the workshop, seeds had been gathered and catalogued for the seed library, located at the Dysart branch of the Haliburton County Public Library.

There are two more seed workshops this summer. On Aug. 12 at 6 p.m. the group will discuss three ways to save tomato seeds. On Aug. 28 at 6 p.m. will be a workshop on saving "difficult" seeds such as squash and cucumber.

ONTARIO
Your Future

Promoting Algonquin development

Enhancing the economic capacity of the Algonquins of Ontario (AOO) is an indispensable element woven throughout the preliminary draft agreement-in-principle (AIP). From early in the treaty negotiations – and as set out in the statement of shared objectives – the AOO, Canada and Ontario committed to expanding the economic opportunities for Algonquins while also benefitting and promoting general economic and commercial activities throughout the territory.

The finalization of a modern-day treaty will enrich the Algonquin presence across the territory, including the nation's capital, and build upon the Aboriginal presence and vitality within Canada. It will also build a foundation for increased economic opportunities for the AOO, while ensuring the cultural and social fabric of the Algonquin people is maintained and strengthened in years to come.

Together, the land and capital components proposed in the preliminary draft AIP will be critical to the future economic prosperity and cultural recognition of the AOO. The benefits of a secure land base and increased financial capacity will provide new investment opportunities as well as the ability to create new Algonquin programs and services, including education, training opportunities and health care initiatives. Such platforms will create key economic opportunities that nurture and respect longstanding cultural and spiritual practices of the Algonquin people, while providing the training and education needed to promote self-sufficiency and success in today's economy.

The Algonquin people will also be equipped with the avenues to contribute to the decision-making process regarding forest management and stewardship. The AOO and Ontario are committed to working cooperatively to maintain support for the existing forest industry, while increasing Algonquin participation in, and benefits from the forestry sector.

A treaty will provide for unparalleled economic development opportunities that will not only benefit the AOO, but will also provide a tremendous benefit to our neighbours living within the territory. A treaty will remove the barriers to economic growth created by existing uncertainties and contribute to a more stable social, political and economic environment with greater potential for regional economic development, jobs and growth.

The AOO recognize that increasing Algonquin economic capacity is inextricably linked to the broader economic development of Eastern Ontario. As our negotiations move forward, the AOO are already participating in a number of exciting economic development initiatives, including working with:

- Various private sector proponents and the Ministry of Northern Development and Mines through the Mineral Exploration and Development Protocol Agreement
- Rideau Transit Group as the project lead for the Ottawa Light Rail Transit project to explore the availability and use of Algonquin personnel, equipment and materials
- Canada Lands Company through the CFB Rockcliffe Participation Agreement which establishes the direct participation and financial interest of the AOO in the development of one of the most desirable and valuable parcels of land in Canada

Through the preliminary draft AIP, the Algonquins of Ontario are united in our commitment to finding "win-win" solutions that will bring economic prosperity to Algonquins and our neighbours alike.

This column is the seventh in a series providing insights into Algonquin history, the foundation for the land claim, elements of the preliminary draft AIP and next steps in the journey. The next column will focus on the ongoing consultation efforts on the preliminary draft AIP. For more information visit www.tanakiwin.com.

Actor-turned-realtor to host Cottage Life TV series

Jenn Watt
Editor

Every 10 years or so, Chestnut Park realtor Rob Serediuk changes things up.

He started as an actor in musicals like Rent and Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat, went on to work for Rogers Communications in Toronto and finally ended up in Haliburton opening a brokerage near Kennebec Lake.

In August, he'll get a chance to revisit his past career when he hosts Cottage Life Channel's What's For Sale?

The program is a new venture for a new channel, airing this fall highlighting the excitement and challenges of buying cottage properties.

The show bounces around between cottage country in Ontario, hitting Prince Edward County, Muskoka and Collingwood alongside Haliburton.

For the episodes taking place in the Highlands, Serediuk will take the lead, bringing potential buyers to a range of abodes.

"I'm more excited for the opportunity it gives Haliburton and bringing awareness to our area," said Serediuk.

Along with his partner Greg McInnes, Serediuk opened the Haliburton branch of Chestnut Park in 2011.

He sees What's For Sale? as a chance to widen awareness of Haliburton, which is sometimes lost in the shadow of Muskoka.

He said Haliburton usually attracts buyers who are looking for a quiet hideaway, not a summer of dining and shopping.

"It's a different type of cottaging," he said, adding that Haliburton shouldn't change that style because it keeps the area distinct.

"It keeps Haliburton special. A lot of the buyers don't want a Walmart [close by]," he said.

And those who buy in the Highlands can usually find more value for their money.

Tammy Marlowe Johnson, producer of the program, said they will be visiting properties in a middle-class price range.

"For the most part we're looking at cottages the average person could attain," she said.

"We want our viewers to relate to [buyers] who are shopping," she said, "We hope that people who haven't bought a cottage yet can get some exposure and see what the buying experience is like."

Serediuk will take buyers to any properties they are interested in, not just his listings, and said What's For Sale? will also feature B-roll, or extra footage, of Haliburton landmarks and attractions.

The program will be similar to House Hunters or Property Virgins.

Marlowe Johnson contacted Serediuk to host the Haliburton programs after finding him online.

She said she interviewed about four-dozen real estate agents across the four areas the show is profiling before settling on one for each area.

"I just thought Rob was a great representation of the personality of the area, he's enthusiastic, he loves the cottage life, he lives in the cottage area," she said.

Serediuk stressed that the program wasn't about him, it was about Haliburton.

"At the end of the day, the show is not about me," he said.

"It's a great marketing tactic ... and a great opportunity overall for everyone."

The program will air this fall on the Cottage Life Channel.

Chestnut Park sales rep Rob Serediuk stands outside his Kennebec Lake real estate office on July 25. Serediuk is set to host episodes of Cottage Life channel's What's For Sale? The show will follow cottage buyers as they make their choice of properties guided by local real estate agents. The program will have between three and four episodes in Haliburton.

Executive Director (1.0 FTE)

The Haliburton Highlands Family Health Team is located in Haliburton, Ontario.

The Haliburton Highlands Family Health Team Board of Directors are looking for an innovative and energetic ED with demonstrated management skills to implement and administer the operations of the Haliburton Highlands Family Health Team. This is a full time leadership position, requiring excellent interpersonal and team-building skills, and expertise in financial management, human resources, and program planning. The ED will work with physicians, interprofessional health care providers (IHP's), administrative staff and the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care officials.

The ED will coordinate the development, planning and delivery of an integrated model incorporating the Family Health Team model along with the Haliburton Highlands Family Health Organization with the targets (fiscal and program delivery goals) as determined and approved by the Board of Directors.

The team is composed of two clinical sites and is made up of 12 family physicians, their office staff and a growing number of Family Health Team professions and visiting specialists.

This important role requires an individual with a motivational leadership style who is well organized, goal oriented and thrives in a challenging environment. You must excel at managing people in a team environment. This position requires excellent communication skills, solid computer skills and experience working with a Board of Directors.

The Ideal Candidate will have:

- ☛ Master's degree in Health Administration or a related field, plus five years administrative experience
- OR
- ☛ Bachelor's degree in Business Administration or a Health Related field, plus five years relevant management experience.
- ☛ Strong financial and human resource management skills essential.
- ☛ Experience working in a Blended Capitation Model and knowledge of Ministry funding.

Do you know where your soap comes from?

Story by Angelica Blenich

Haliburton County has long been known for its clean air, shimmering lakes and scenic sunsets. And now soap can be added to that list.

In the past few years an increasing number of locally owned and operated soap companies have popped up in the Highlands, focused on creating all-natural products.

Ranging from bars of soap made with goat's milk to lemon scented hand cream and rosewater facial products, skin care products are being churned out across county.

Val Balaski began her own skin care line, Svikiro, because of a life-long struggle with her own skin.

Balaski, 62, struggled with acne since her teenage years and was always told it would eventually improve.

"As I grew older the doctor would tell me my skin would get better and it never did," said Balaski. "So a few years ago I really got serious about making it [products] for myself. Then some friends and family wanted to start using it too."

Balaski began taking courses and learning how to make her own products before officially launching Svikiro in June 2012.

The products are created using spring water from the Highlands infused with crystals, she said.

"It's all natural and as organic as I can possibly get it," she said.

Balaski adds flower waters, such as rose and cyprus, vegetable wax, butters and essential oils to the products.

"The oils that I use, I want them to be the best quality that they can be because they're going on your skin, which is your largest organ," she said.

Like a cake recipe, the skin care line is continuously tweaked to make it better, said Balaski.

Svikiro includes facial cleansers, moisturizers, toners, sunscreen, body butters, baby oils, hand creams and an anti-aging line.

Balaski customizes the products to the individual and recommends they be used within six months of when they are purchased. They are vegan friendly.

"Somebody put it on their skin and said it makes my skin sing," said Balaski. "Others have tried it and they just love it."

For more information on Svikiro contact Balaski at 705-754-2651.

There's nothing plain about Plain Jane Natural Products, an idea that was stewing in Melanie Tofflemire's head for the past few years.

Launched this past spring, Tofflemire for years wanted to create a natural line of creams and balms made in reusable and compostable packaging.

"I've always been really interested in natural medicines and always had the idea to do natural products that are sustainable," she said.

A mother of three, Tofflemire did a lot of research on how to make homemade balms and salves.

The creams, such as Love my Lemongrass, are sold in mason jars and are made with items such as olive oil, vitamin E and lemongrass essential oil.

Plain Jane Natural Products are created by Melanie Tofflemire at her home in Haliburton, using environmentally friendly ingredients and reusable/compostable packaging. /Photo by Tim Tofflemire

"A lot of cosmetic products are full of chemicals and these are natural products that are homemade," she said.

Other products include lip balms, which are made with a beeswax component. Tofflemire hopes to launch a deodorant and an insect repellent soon.

With Jane being her middle name, Tofflemire didn't have to look far for inspiration in finding a moniker.

Plain Jane Natural Products will soon be launching a website, with products available for sale online. Local retail outlets include Abbey Gardens and Moonflower.

You can find Plain Jane Natural Products online at www.plainjanenaturalproducts.ca contact Tofflemire at plainjane502@gmail.com or 705-306-0287.

In 1998 the Haliburton Soap Factory Ltd was created, paving the way for other soap companies to follow.

The idea was stirred up when owners George and Elaine Schmid were out with friends and a discussion sparked the realization that most soap was not made in Canada, Elaine said.

"After doing some research we found this to be the case so George went on a trip to Minnesota to learn all about making soap," she said.

For the past 15 years the Schmidts have been handcrafting biodegradable vegetable glycerine soap from West Guilford, as well as natural insect repellants.

"The insect repellants are becoming very popular and selling as far north as Yellowknife," Elaine said.

The Schmidts do not use any unnecessary chemicals but rather coconut and palm oils and botanicals. The soaps are biodegradable and not tested on animals.

Many retailers throughout the county and the province sell their products, which are also available online at www.haliburtonsoapfactory.com.

After purchasing Natural Soaps and Crafts a year ago, Deb Deremo rebranded it with the help of Mike Jaycock to create Billy Goat Soaps.

Deremo makes 28 kinds of soap with goat's milk and other natural ingredients, which are biodegradable, at her home in Haliburton.

"I really wasn't looking for a business but when I looked into it I was intrigued by it because of the ingredients," she said.

Types of soap include citronella, eucalyptus, lavender and oatmeal, amongst others. The soothing elements in the soaps are nourishing and reduce the possibility of skin irritation, said Deremo.

Stores that sell Billy Goat Soaps within the county include Aprons and Soaps, Heritage House Café with more to come.

For more information on the soap, including retailers across the province, visit www.billygoatsoaps.com or call 1-888-945-8899.

Deer spend summer months bulking up for the difficult winter ahead.

Predators and prey

The fawn, sturdy on its feet and full of bounce, stands by her mother and feeds beneath the roadside cedars. She's healthy and sleek, with spots in all the right places and enough inborn caution to know that she should move off as we approach for a photo.

Both deer are doing their best to take advantage of this time of plenty. From here till fall, there won't be a garden or apple tree that is safe from their appetites. The doe aims to put on fat for the cold weather and breeding season to come. The fawn hopes to thrive so that it can survive its first winter and outrun its predators.

In the wilds, summer is the time to grow. Less energy is expended in the warm weather; cover is thicker and it's easier to hide. But most of all there is plenty.

Distilled to its simplest terms, it's all about numbers.

If we're having a good year for things like mast crops (berries, shrubs, fruit trees, young saplings, seeds, worms, buds in early spring, bugs, and so on) the things that feed upon them, (the varying hares, songbirds, chipmunks voles, mice, toads, beavers and groundhogs) will do well.

If so, a grouse brood will have up to 12 chicks; so too will wild turkey and mallard hens. Then there are the geese and song birds and the varying hares with up to four leverets per litter. And so on.

In these numbers lies some measure of safety for the ecosystem as a whole. The fox, goshawk, wolf, hawk or owl cannot take them all. Though they might try, in the end, there is always a surplus of one prey species or another. And this saves the other species in the following season.

When the woods are filled with hares, some predators key in on them and grouse get a break. When grouse numbers are high, predators focus on them and the hares can begin to rebound. If deer numbers are low, the wolf numbers will follow suit in a year or two. When the deer rebound so too do their predators a year or two later.

How much prey was available last year or the year before determines how many young predators will roam the landscape this year.

It's the same tried and true formula every year. When predators are low, prey recovers. When prey recovers, predators soon thrive too. When predators numbers get high, they knock the prey populations down. When prey numbers are low, the predators soon follow. And the circle begins anew.

Predators and prey, like water, eventually find their own level. In nature, it all makes sense.

Sunshine Boys comes to summer festival

"There aren't too many roles for old guys anymore," cracks David Mills about his stint as Willy Clark in the Highlands Summer Festival's upcoming production of Neil Simon's The Sunshine Boys.

It's a warm afternoon and Mills is at the festival's storage and rehearsal space in Haliburton's industrial park with Glen Carter, who will fill the shoes of Al Lewis.

The Sunshine Boys tells the story of former Vaudevillian duo Lewis and Clark who, after a decades-long partnership that ended acrimoniously, are convinced by Clark's nephew Ben to reunite for a television special on the history of comedy.

The result is, well . . . let's just say Mills and Carter are rehearsing a scene where they are sparring, one armed with a knife, the other, a coat stand.

"We aggravate each other to no end," Carter says of the characters.

As for Carter and Mills, the two have shared the stage once before, in a production of There Goes the Bride in the early years of the festival, now in its 14th season, and of which Mills is a perennial fixture.

Carter is seasoned on stage too, a regular performer with the Highlands Little Theatre.

The two are central characters in a cast of eight, sharing seven roles.

They started rehearsals in May.

"It's Neil Simon at his best," Mills says. "It's very funny. It also explores some human relationships."

The show is directed by Corey Agnew, who worked on a recent Toronto production of Les Miserables and who Mills and Carter describe as a genius.

"I would use the word 'brilliant,'" Mills says.

He adds that one of his favourite parts of the festival is that it incorporates local young people, training them at a professional level.

Glen Carter, left, and David Mills get into their roles as curmudgeonly vaudevillians Al Lewis and Willy Clark (get it?) for the Haliburton Highlands Summer Festival's production of Neil Simon's The Sunshine Boys.

Fifteen-year-old Rebecca Kidd, who sits at table in the rehearsal space, is the stage manager for The Sunshine Boys.

She'll be the one taking notes and keeping the cast on target during performances.

"She keeps us in line," Carter says.

"She's tougher than she looks," Mills agrees.

The Sunshine Boys runs from July 29 to Aug. 2 and Aug. 6 to 9.

Shows are at 8 p.m.

For tickets and more information on this year's festival, visit www.highlandsummerfestival.on.ca.

I knew exactly who I was going to call when it came time to sell... Karen Nimigon. Her marketing, staging advice sold the heck out of the place and one week later we had the perfect buyer. Karen then again listened to our needs for a new home and found us many options in the end we found exactly the location we wanted and the cutest house ever. I was grateful for her knowledge and her advice. She always kept us on track and went over and above in many ways.

Karen Nimigon will always be my first choice for a real estate agent whether I am buying or selling. My experience was made painless by her attention to details, experience, and her willingness to do what it took for a positive outcome

What makes us HALIBURTON?

Since the days when our forefathers stepped foot onto the highlands a century ago, Haliburton folks have embraced our reputation for off-the-beaten-path charm. Perhaps that's what attracts so many urban visitors from the southern cities each summer. Perhaps that's what keeps us resilient against the fury of the northern winter.

At Cedar Winds Country Homes, we make sure each project is interwoven with the spirit of Haliburton County's fortitude and vigor. And what better way to do it than to construct each and every home using locally-sourced material, assembled by indigenous tradespeople.

After all, how can a structure stand solid on Haliburton's strong-featured landscape without deep, local-grown roots? And why use suburban, metropolitan techniques to build a cottage nestled amongst the vast wilderness of the Canadian Shield? It doesn't add up, so we stand by our Haliburton roots when we source our materials and labour.

From the beginning of the design process, we strive to forge a neighbourly bond with each of our clients. Forging a strong foundation of trust, Glenn and Teresa work closely to extract the key features of your family's perfect cottage getaway: leisure, relaxation, adventure, and escape. We unite those virtues to create a design that merges the elements of your cottage dreams with our deep knowledge of the local environment. The result is a personalized solution interlaced with the local spirit –your country home, with a unique Haliburton twist.

New products and processes are being developed every day, and Glenn will help you to understand and use them to your benefit. Innovations in foundations, thermal systems, exterior cladding and roofing materials can all impact the overall building performance and construction costs. By taking an educational approach to design consultation, you can be confident in the choices you make along the way. Informed decisions make all the difference.

As your project advances you can trust Glenn to get the job done, because he trusts only the finest local technicians to do what they do best: construct strong homes. By closely managing the project every step of the way, Glenn coordinates everything that is required to ensure meaningful progress is made each day, all while keeping clients abreast with weekly reviews. Glenn's precise project planning allows him to foresee build stages yet to come, and involve clients in key decisions long before they need to be made.

Teresa plays an important role in the process, lending her expertise on the finer points of living space design. Her ability to visualize a room before it exists contributes to the harmonious flow of the blueprint, and she uses her complementary style to help clients to see their dreams before they reach reality. Teresa meshes modern, functional design with the visual details of an authentic country home creating a truly unique and personalized experience.

Glenn, Teresa, and the entire Cedar Winds family welcome you to our neighbourhood in the wilderness. We look forward to helping you escape the city, kick up your feet, and join us in the Highlands. We'll see you there.

Finding balance in our lives

Column by Lea Kitler, Magnificentill.ca

All we need to survive in this world is shelter, water and food, and to be sustainable, we have to work together with our needs and wants in a cohesive manner.

The goal of walking a sustainable life is not to save money or to live without the luxuries, but rather, in living a more satisfying life.

After experiencing first-hand the zero mile diet, I now have a greater appreciation and understanding about the benefits and dedication involved in being self-sufficient.

My diet consists of only the food we grow, raise and preserve on the farm. My body is grateful for the totally chemical free, high protein and very low carbohydrates diet with absolutely no processed sugar, salt or caffeine.

My energy level has soared and my carbon footprint for my food source is reduced to walking to the garden, cold storage room or freezer and occasionally to the hen house for fresh eggs.

Getting up at 6 a.m. on a hot summer's morning to work on the never-ending task of weeding the three acres of vegetable gardens is not considered work, but an opportunity to be completely responsible for what I eat, and mucking out the stinky chicken, goat and pigpens are now more of a reward from our healthy livestock and a confirmation of a job well done.

We continue to be frugal with all the building projects on the farm and we salvage whatever we can to build shelters for all the animals and creative spaces for us to enjoy as well.

The winter months are more palatable now that we have a sauna.

The spring seedlings enjoy their early start in the greenhouse.

By the time August rolls around there is no better place to be boiling down our preserves than in the outdoor kitchen, and where we have enjoyed many late night pizza parties beside the outdoor bread oven.

Finding a balance in all that we do is what makes our lives livable.

This is one of the most important things for us to keep in mind with the vast number of projects we have on the go.

We have to understand the climate and have it work for us and not against us.

So, on the really hot days it is better for us to take a break from our chores and head to the lake for a swim.

There is nothing better than at the end of the day going to bed exhausted knowing you have done everything you can do to tend to your animals, grow your own food, wanting to rise early to greet the new day.

Forest Festival line-up features all sorts of flavours

In just a few weeks sounds of funky jazz, rhythmic beats, fiery fiddling and synchronized strings will be reverberating off the water and through the trees.

The annual Forest Festival will be bringing top-notch performances to the stunning backdrop of the Bone Lake Amphitheatre and the Historic Logging Museum.

As in years before, this year's line-up is no disappointment, with Canadian legends such as Natalie MacMaster, Murray McLauchlan and Lighthouse gracing the stage.

With artistic director Sean Pennylegion at the helm, the festival will take place from Aug. 14 to 18, with eight performances in total.

For some artists it is their first time performing in Haliburton County, for others a return trip to the scenic cottage area.

However all are anticipating an electrifying festival with excitement.

Chris McKhool is bringing his show Fiddlefire to the Historic Logging Museum for the first time but is no stranger to the festival, having previously played with the band Sultans of String at the event.

Aimed at a young audience, Fiddlefire is an interactive, family-style show.

"It's kind of like Sultans of String for kids, we play everything from Gypsy jazz to funk to classical to folk to scatting and everything in between," said McKhool. "It's a really fun way of getting young people involved in listening to and playing music."

Audience members at the show can expect an opportunity to get up on stage and play an instrument, sing along and dance.

A father to a two-year-old daughter, McKhool has been doing music for young audiences for almost 20 years.

"I think one of the things that's really fun for me is to inspire kids to get involved in music," he said. "One of the best parts for me is the Q and A at the end, because that's when they get to actually interact with real musicians who are making a living at it."

The Fiddlefire show is especially appealing for kids between the ages of four and 10, but also entertaining for those from two to 102, said McKhool.

It will take place on Sunday, Aug. 18 at 11 a.m. at the Historic Logging Museum.

The evening prior on Saturday, Aug. 17 the Bone Lake Amphitheatre will be filled with fiery music as fiddlers Natalie MacMaster and her husband Donnell Leahy take to the stage.

Originally from Cape Breton, MacMaster now lives in nearby Lakefield with Leahy and their five children, who range in age from 10 months old to seven.

A fiddler her entire life, MacMaster has only ever had one career, touring extensively throughout Canada and the world, performing about 250 shows a year.

But she particularly enjoys sharing the stage with her husband.

"It's always more fun when we get to do shows together," she said.

Fiddling was part of MacMaster's upbringing in the East Coast, where it remains a vibrant part of the Acadian culture.

Those attending the concert at the Forest Festival can expect lively music, with influences from around the world mixed in.

"We like to grab people's attention with the faster stuff and then slow it down a bit," she said.

The MacMaster/Leahy concert will take place at 8 p.m.

Canadian band Lighthouse, which is comprised of 10 members, will fill the stage on Friday, Aug. 16 to a sold out show.

Creator of the group Skip Prokop, 70, has been a musician since the days of Woodstock, touring with Lighthouse since its inception in 1968.

Its current members have been together since the early 1990s, which Prokop believes is an amazing accomplishment in itself.

"The audience really benefits from that because we are so comfortable playing [together]. It is truly like a band of brothers."

The Haliburton show will include hits such as Sunny Days, One Fine Morning and Pretty Lady.

On Thursday, Aug. 15 at 8 p.m. The Heavyweights Brass Band will bring their horns to the Highlands, delighting attendees with funky, New Orleans jazz music.

From Toronto, the band consists of Christ Butcher on trombone, Jon Challoner on trumpet, Paul Metcalfe on saxophone, Rob Teehan on sousaphone and Lowell Whitty on drums.

"It's very much a collective," said Butcher.

The instrumental group was formed in 2009 through musical connections, friendships, and a Craigslist ad, said Butcher.

The band intends to bring a genre of music that is unique and vibrant to the county, with a flare for dramatic drums and thumping trombones.

"A jazzy funeral march is one way to describe New Orleans brass music," said Butcher. "That's the roots of the tradition."

The trombone player remembers visiting the southern U.S. state when he was younger, the impression still a part of his musical memories to this day.

"I went to New Orleans when I was 18 or 19 and I remember hearing a brass band play right in the French Quarter," said Butcher. "They were playing with such strength, it blew me away."

Jazz will also be part of David Woodhead's Confabulation show on Aug. 18 at 2 p.m., but in a more untraditional way.

Woodhead, 61, describes the concert style as a trio of jazz, folk and world music, which will be played by saxophonist Richard Underhill, violinist/composer

Anne Lindsay, keyboardist Doug Wilde, sympatico drummer Rich Greenspoon and percussionist Walter MacLean.

"Just in the last few years it became sort of obvious to me that I should put something together to play a different kind of music, something that was of my own fabrication," said Woodhead.

The musician has been performing at folk festivals since 1975, which led to playing with artists such as Stan Rogers and Valdi.

After years spent playing with both folk and jazz musicians, Woodhead realized he wanted to combine the two groups.

The confabulation performs music written by Woodhead, who writes with the ensemble in mind, he said.

They first began performing in 2009, with the first show played at Hugh's Room in Toronto.

"It's an original take on jazz, it's definitely not traditional," he said. "It's a different kind of music, it's something that's just made up."

A cottager near Dorset, Woodhead is familiar with the Highlands and is looking forward to playing at the logging museum.

"I feel very lucky to be able to play in nice venues and interesting places. It's the variety that keeps me going," he said.

Tickets for the entire festival or individual shows can be purchased online at www.madeinhaliburton.ca, or by calling 705-754-2198.

More information including a run-down of the entire festival can be found at www.theforestfestival.com.

The Heavyweights Brass Band features five members, who play a variety of horn instruments and drums in a funky jazz style. The band will be performing at the Forest Festival on Thursday, Aug. 15 at the Bone Lake Amphitheatre. /Photo submitted Minden Times reporter Chad Ingram, left, porcelain and stoneware artist Charlene McConnell, whose work is showcased in front, and Haliburton Echo and Times columnist Steve Galea look at art books in preparation for the Tour de Forest Artisans Tour. The tour includes 20 artists, seven studios in Haliburton County. It is on Aug. 3 and 4 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The DaVinci Road

Story by Steve Galea ~ Photos by Darren Lum

Some people sing George Gershwin's Summer time and the Living is Easy. But, let me tell you, those folks don't share a sweltering office in the attic of an old newspaper building like intrepid reporter Chad Ingram and I do. If they did, they might be singing a whole different tune. I'm thinking something along the lines of Hot, Hot, Hot by Buster Pointedexter and his Banshees of Blue – but that's only because, as far as I'm aware, there aren't any cool songs about chafing.

If I recall correctly, it was at 11:55 a.m. that Ingram and I regarded each other nervously once again. Though neither of us said it, we both knew that at precisely 12 noon, editor Jenn Watt would unlock our door and throw in another half-melted ice cube for us to fight over. After all, our previous editor Martha "Parsimonious" Perkins had taught her well.

"We've got to get out of here," I whispered.

"You go first!" Ingram laughed maniacally. "Then I'll have the ice cube all to myself!"

Despite the heat stroke, Chad was onto me.

It occurred to me at that moment that there had to be a better way.

"Chad," I said. "Have you ever considered that we could do better in another line of work?"

"Like what?" he said.

"Well, our local artists seem to have it all figured out," I muttered. "They make art all day and then have shows where people buy it and say nice things."

"You think we could be artists?" he said.

Anyone who had ever seen the detailed stick figures Chad had drawn in the Echo washroom knew the answer to this. That washroom was his refuge, studio and one of the reasons why he faked a nervous bladder. It was why some of us called him Vincent Van Go.

"Of course," I muttered. "We can be artists."

"What kind of art would you like to do?" he asked.

"I'd like to make wildlife art," I stated quickly.

"You'd like to make wildlife fart?" he replied. "How? Are you going to feed them beans?"

"I said wildlife art!" I repeated.

"I heard you the first time," he said. "I get it! You're trying to make a statement that something stinks in the environment. That's brilliant! I wish I had thought of it! You are a genius and a visionary!"

"Well, true art means taking risks," I muttered. "My next project is with a bull moose and Mexican food ..."

It was on the heels of those historic words that Chad and I slipped out the building and went down The DaVinci Road.

Of course, not just anyone can be an artist. Even we knew this much. So we pretended to read books on DaVinci and Michelangelo and learned to colour within the lines – for the most part. (Sadly, I couldn't find a willing moose.)

Our goal wasn't to make any old art either. No, we wanted the kind that people would be proud to hang upon their fridge.

Believe it or not, we were naturals. And, before long, we had amassed a collection of two Sharpie-on-copy-paper portraits that were sure to take the art world by storm.

We called ourselves the Group of Two, partly because there were two of us, but mostly because The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen had already been taken.

I won't lie and say that we knew what it was like to be starving artists, but I will say we got a little peckish by the time 3 o'clock break rolled around. And, needless to say, we didn't like that feeling.

This, more than anything, is what drove us to visit artists Tom Green, Charlene McConnell and Susan MacDonald. Once there, we presented our work for consideration in their upcoming Tour De Forest Artisans Tour.

They did briefly consider it too – if less than a millisecond can be considered brief.

Truly great art can be ahead of its time

In the end, we discovered that sometimes truly great art is a little ahead of its time. Tom, Charlene and Susan confirmed this by saying we should come back in about 50 years or so.

Thus ended an era in art that might never be replicated. That's right; we forgot to cap our Sharpies ...

For a true taste of local art, visit the seven studios of the seventh annual Tour De Forest Artisans Tour. The event, held on Aug. 3 and 4 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., features the work of 20 unique artists.

Each studio visit will allow you to meet the people who produce wonderful work in a variety of media including fabric, wearable arts, glass, wood, pottery, oil, watercolours, mixed media and acrylic paints. The venues are situated in relaxing outdoors settings and the tour route is convenient and scenic.

For more information visit www.haliburtontourdeforest.com or call Charlene at 705-448-2966 or email toudeforest1@gmail.com.

Camping for a living

Column by Janet Trull

"Fire's burning, fire's burning
Draw nearer, draw nearer
In the gloaming, in the gloaming
Come sing and be merry."

Sitting around the campfire at the end of a satisfying day of paddling and climbing and swimming, the moon rising through summer haze, campers are already nostalgic for their summer camp experience. Away from the comforts of home, a lot of growing up happens at camp. Here in the woods they discover a part of themselves that is strong and healthy and wise. If you've ever been at Camp Wanakita on the last day of a session, you know how heartbroken the campers are to leave.

There are tears, and plenty of them. But promises of "see you next year" ring through the woods as the buses pull away. Campers take with them a new understanding of nature and leave behind a mountain of discarded dirty socks.

Andy Gruppe, director of YMCA Camp Wanakita, never has to leave. Since 2001, Andy has made a full time career at the popular camp on Lake Koshlong. A contender for "Best Job in the World" status, a camp director gets to host thousands of campers every year, mentor counsellors and run diverse and life-changing outdoor programs. Along with his wife, Sara, who teaches French immersion at Stuart Baker Elementary, he also gets to raise his two children, Olivia and Luke, in the middle of Haliburton's natural surroundings.

"Haliburton is a good fit for us," Gruppe says. He loves curling and ice fishing, and his kids participate in many of the area's activities like soccer and hockey. He feels that his family really benefits from the many community connections they have made here.

According to Andy, camp hasn't changed much in the 60 years since it was built.

Activities like kayaking and crafts and archery are still on regular rotation. But it's probably the canoe trips, he says, that instill the biggest sense of pride and accomplishment in campers. They push themselves physically and emotionally out in the wilderness in a way that helps them overcome adversity in other areas of their lives.

The biggest change is the campers themselves, and their relatively new reliance on technology. At Camp Wanakita, cellphones, iPods and tablets are all banned. Two weeks without technology is a real game-changer for many young people. Withdrawal can be painful. The cure? A shivery morning dip in Lake Koshlong as the mist rises. A portage through rough terrain. A picnic on Turtle Rock. A romp in the swamp.

With rustic cabins connected by narrow footpaths, Wanakita is no luxury vacation. Living communally with other kids their age is a new challenge for many campers.

There are lessons learned here about kindness and inclusion. Wanakita offers programs that support special needs campers partnering with organizations like Reach for the Rainbow, and, for the past 20 years, they have teamed up with Hemophilia Ontario, offering full integration to campers with this blood disorder.

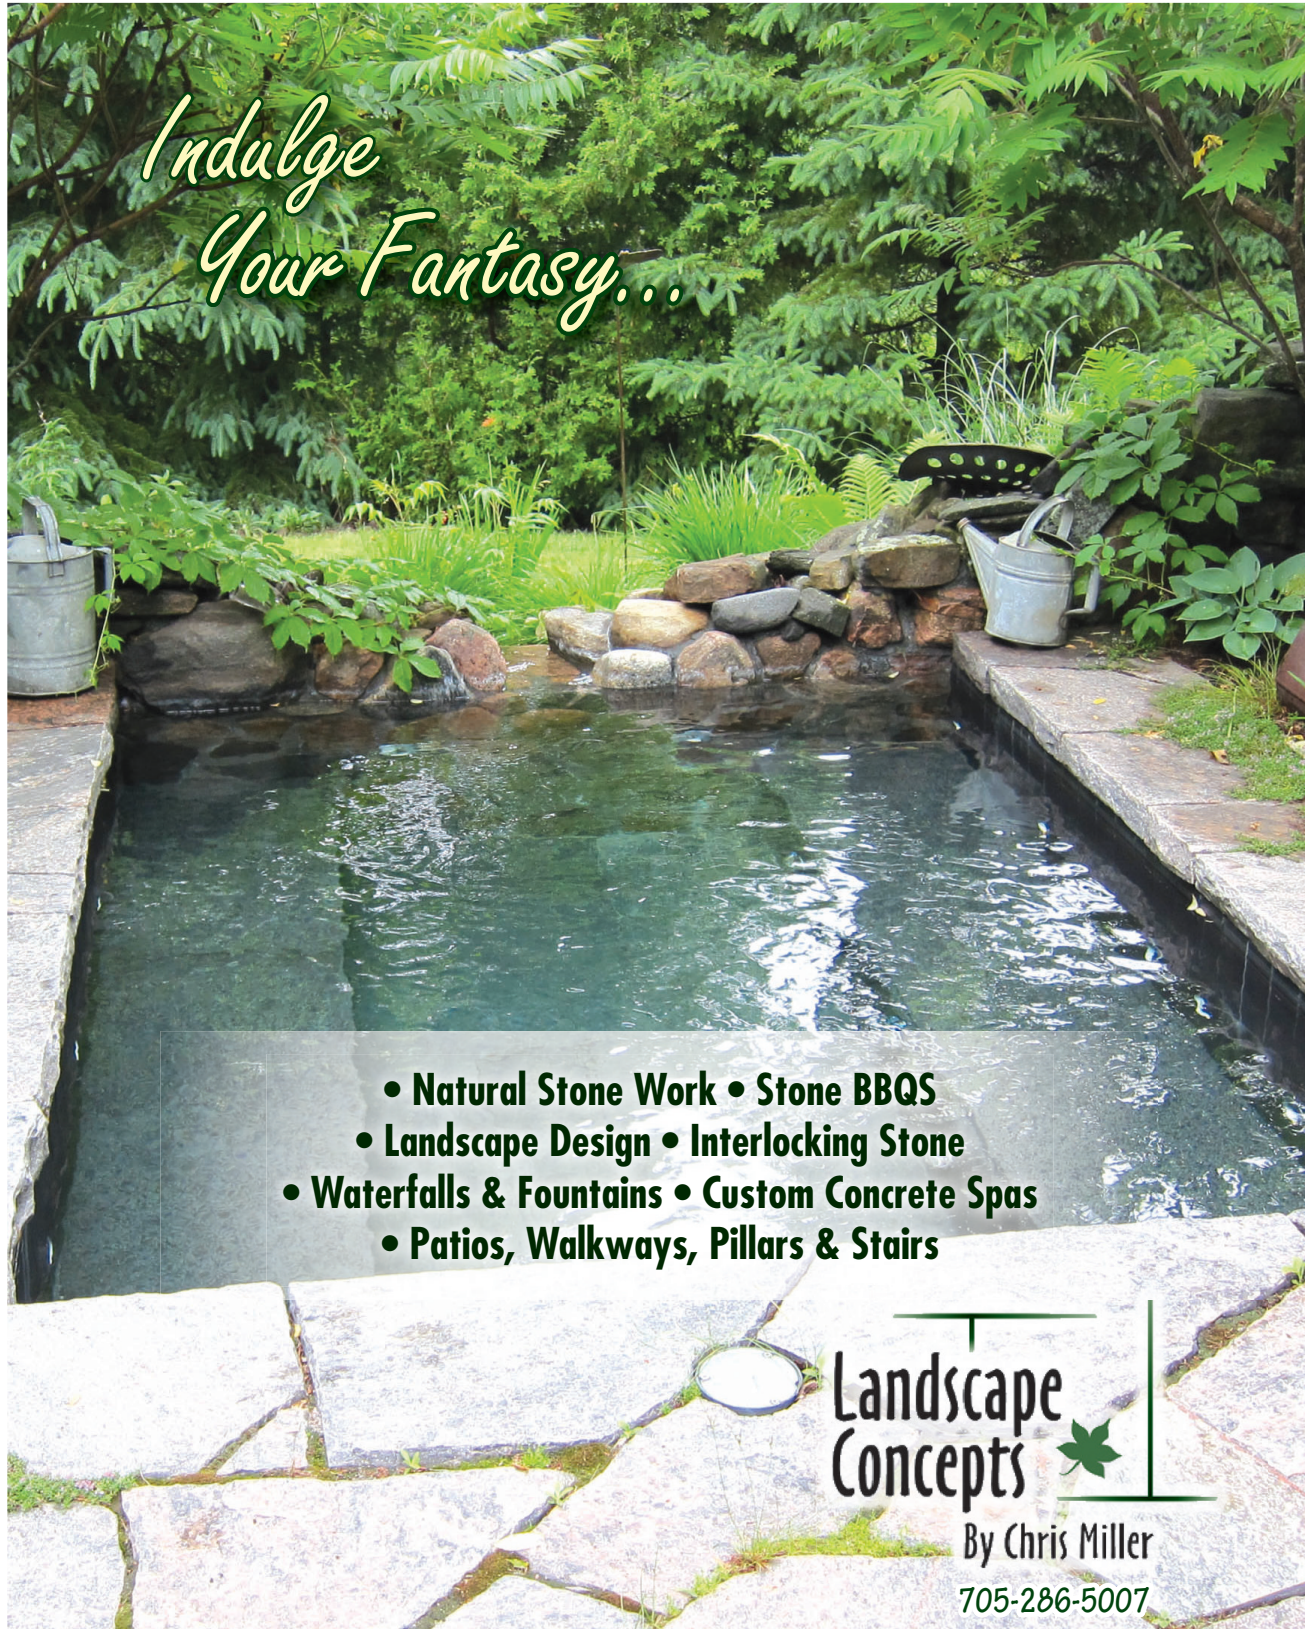

Awareness of the environment is a focus at Wanakita, starting with low tolerance for food waste. "Take what you need, but eat what you take," is the motto at meals. Observing wildlife at close range is much more powerful than reading about it in a textbook.

Learning names of constellations and trees, recognizing different birdcalls, and sharing the forest with deer and moose are all lessons of the unwritten Wanakita curriculum.

As camp director, Andy keeps a file of letters from parents and campers attesting to the difference that camp can make in a young person's life. In a world where kids seem to bounce from one crisis to the next, camp is the tranquil place they can visit in their memories. The "land of the silver birch" in the Haliburton Highlands, has won the hearts of countless campers.

"Blue lake and rocky shore
I will return once more ..."

Or maybe, like Andy Gruppe, you'll find a way to stay.

Nearly $50,000 raised for hospitals

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

The Rotary Charity Golf Classic raised close to $50,000 Thursday. It will be enough to help with the purchase of three automatic medication-dispensing units for the Haliburton and Minden hospitals. The approximate cost for three units is $90,000. The honorary chairman was Scotty Morrison, former NHL referee in chief and Hockey Hall of Fame inductee. There were 164 registered golfers in two flights. The winning team Molson Coors with a score of 54 is Joe Hawley, Braden Bluett, Matt Russelle and Darren Stalteri. There were more than 30 volunteers who helped run the event, including the classic committee chairman Andy Salvatori, and members Bob Nichol, Brad Duckworth, Cheryl McCombe, David Zilstra and Klara Oylser.

Right, Al Zikovitz of Toronto watches his shot off the tee during the 16th Rotary Charity Golf Classic at the Pinestone Resort and Conference Centre on Thursday, July 25. This event raised money for the automatic medication dispensing units for Haliburton and Minden hospitals. The classic featured three hole-in-one prizes worth $45,000.

Duchene driven by Olympic dream

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

Haliburton's Matt Duchene has a lot to play for this season.

Within five days this summer, Duchene was not only given a contract extension with his NHL team the Colorado Avalanche, but been invited to the orientation for the Olympic hockey team. He is honoured and motivated by the invite.

"The camp invite means a lot, making the Olympic team is a major goal of mine and this is the first step. I'm excited to get back on the ice to continue to prove I deserve to be in the conversation for the team. The guys who have the best starts to the season are going to give themselves the best shots at making it," he wrote in a text message from Halifax.

Duchene is training with friend and NHL superstar Sidney Crosby. They are training under Andy O'Brien until September.

Although he acknowledges the difficulty of training, he reminds young hockey players about the obvious benefits to off-season training.

"It's tough because pushing yourself isn't fun and for the most part neither is training but for me I have seen the rewards on the ice of big effort and gains in the weight room and that's what drives me. You're basically making an investment into your future each time you improve in your training," he said.

His achievements on the ice have been rewarded.

The orientation invitation announcement comes on the heels of the Avalanche signing the 22-year-old to a five-year contract extension worth $30 million (US).

Duchene has scored 193 points (82 goals and 111 assists) in 266 games for the Avs.

This extension is a sign Duchene will be part of the team's long-term success.

A future that the Haliburtonian is excited to be part of since the hiring of former Avalanche players Joe Sakic, who is the executive vice-president of hockey operations and Patrick Roy, who is the new coach, both players he idolized as a kid.

"Having a chance to win a cup with those guys is something that is gonna be very special. Can't wait," he said.

Cadet Burley enters fourth week of parachute training

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

After a serious injury left his chances of completion in doubt, cadet Keith Burley is finding the resolve to push forward in his bid to parachute.

Burley, who is a cadet chief warrant officer with the 1129 Haliburton Royal Canadian Army Cadets, has endured the highs and the lows, suffering a fall that nearly put him out.

This past week he started additional training at the Canadian Forces Land Advanced Warfare Centre in Trenton.

"It is extremely intense and fast paced. The biggest thing that makes this training different than anything else is how detailed and practical everything is. It gives a sudden realization of how much is actually involved when descending out of an aircraft. Two weeks of hard training for five one-minute performances," he writes in a text message from Trenton.

He has learned about rigging equipment, aircraft drill landings and flight drills, followed by practising and memorizing the procedures.

This was his third week of the five-week Canadian Forces cadet parachute course.

The course originally accepted 49 cadets from across the Canada.

The final week puts the cadets to the test when they jump from the plane flying close to 1,500 feet.

Summer-ending event hits 16

Darren Lum
Staff reporter

The importance of the Kash Dash End of Summer Dash continues, mirroring the enjoyment it has provided its participants since it started 16 years ago.

The event started by Dr. Steve Ferracuti continues to give proceeds to the Canadian Physicians for Aid and Relief (CPAR).

CPAR is non-profit development organization that works with East African communities such as Ethiopia, Malawi, Tanzania and Uganda to improve lives. CPAR partners with local communities to provide access to clean water, adequate food, primary health services and a safe and healthy environment.

Ferracuti loves the event not only because it raises necessary funds for a cause close to his heart, but also has become a summer tradition for runners of all ages and abilities. It has become an annual commitment for a core group of runners and keeps him motivated.

This isn't a large event, however, it does represent something larger.

Ferracuti remembers a visit with CPAR to see project sites such as Uganda several years ago. CPAR helped to re-train people, as a war there had left a generation displaced and with few farming skills.

"They basically had been driven from their land and were living in camps. The whole generation lived that way. CPAR has been able to help those people get back to those things," he said. "In countries when that wasn't a factor they have been good at improving farming methods. Not to the point of corporate/factory farming, but just helping subsistent farmers get more from their land."

The point of CPAR is to give African communities the means to help themselves.

This includes health education.

There is a plan towards not only increasing health service delivery, but to work with nurses, health workers and midwives so they will be better equipped and educated.

Besides assorted prizes in the run, the top male and female finishers receive $100.

Ferracuti points out this race is more than the prizes, as it is about the camaraderie and the celebration of running.

This year's event features a 10-kilometre race that will start at the Pinestone Resort and Conference Centre on Hwy. 21, making its way down the highway to Wigamog Road and return to the Pinestone. It starts at 10 a.m.

"Even though it's the same loop, it is actually easier to run it from the Pinestone," he said, adding the ascent on the Wigamog comes in the first third instead of the last third.

The one-kilometre Kids' Run in the Kash End of Summer Dash starts the event at 9 a.m.

All participants will receive a race T-shirt and be served a barbecue lunch at the finish of the feature race.

To register or get more information see www.kashdash.ca/.

Rock bass winners

On Saturday, July 6, Kennisis Lake Cottage Owners Association hosted their annual rock bass fishing derby. The event was organized by Mike Neely. A total of 141 pounds of rock bass were caught by the participants. The winners in the 12 year and under category were Megan Neely and Meghan Beaton, they caught a total of 20.1 pounds of rock bass. The winners of the 13 and over category were Jack McTiernan and Owen Genautis, they caught a total of 41.1 rock bass. Congratulations! Thank you to all of the participants, it was a great day of fun and fishing. Photo submitted

Basket of goodies for Guilford resident

West Guilford

Eleanor Cooper

754-2278

You may have heard of The Mad Hatter from Canoe FM who goes around weekly to give a basket of goodies from Canoe to the lucky person who happens to be listening to Canoe when he/she calls.

On Saturday, July 20, it was Lana Stamp, daughter of Craig and Sherry Stamp of West Guilford who got the package consisting of T-shirt, cup and various items that advertise the community and the radio station in particular. Congratulations, Lana, and enjoy all the prizes!

Rebecca Kidd of Green Lake Road has worked backstage over several years in summer festival theatre.

Her experience in working with props and stage crew for at least two years has led her to become stage manager for The Sunshine Boys, a vaudeville comedy by Neil Simon that runs from July 29 to Aug. 2 and on Aug. 6 to 9.

If you've ever helped out backstage or acted onstage, you'll realize how demanding the role of stage manager, so hats off to Rebecca.

Our heartfelt sympathy to Nancy Geddis and family on the passing of Bill Geddis. His expertise in many household areas as well as his musicianship will be missed.

Although not a Guilford resident, Jack Spencley was well known to many of us and our sympathy goes out to Doreen and to Jack's family upon his death at just over 100 years.

Euchre scores: high – Norma Geddes and Ivan Kernohan; low – Kathy Kernohan and Bill Marshall; most lone hands – Kay Morrison and Gerald Hadley; specials – Barbara Brownsberger and Ray Sisson.

Survey to assess local needs

Wilberforce

Hilda Clark

448-2018

A housing survey is currently being carried out in the Municipality of Highlands East. Copies have been circulated in various ways including your Canada Post mailbox. Check it out and see how easy it is to make your ideas known about your current housing needs or those you might have in the future.

Several surveys were carried out in the years before the Maple View Complex was approved and built. And there is usually a long waiting list for those desiring housing there.

Different types of housing are mentioned on the survey. Perhaps if the potential for condominiums was indicated that type of housing could materialize here.

Progress continues on the new library. Fundraising continues for furnishings for it. There's a barbecue coming up by the Wilberforce Pharmacy for that. Check your flyers for more information.

A memorial service celebrating the life of Peter Priestman will be held at St. Margaret's Anglican Church on Saturday, Aug. 3 at 4 p.m. Peter died peacefully on July 22.

The 30th annual Wilberforce Agricultural Fair is being greatly anticipated. Lots of interesting exhibits and events are planned for both Friday and Saturday, Aug. 9 and 10. Got your decisions made about entries in the culinary arts? The horticultural section? The homecrafts? And how about all the neat things kids can enter?

If you haven't got it already, look for the bright green fair booklet. It has tons of information about the Wilberforce Ag Fair.

Health tips for summer fun

Allison Ridgway
 Special to the Echo

Summer means lazy days spent swimming at the beach, taking the kids out to the playground and sipping lemonade on the dock.

Warm weather revellers must also watch out for some all-too-common summer dangers, however, says Dr. Arlene King, chief medical officer of health at the Ontario Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care.

Here's a list of summer's top health concerns:

Heat exhaustion and heatstroke: "Our No. 1 concern in summer is the heat," explains King. "It's important to check up on family, friends and neighbours who are at higher risk of heat-related illness, specifically the elderly and young children."

Anyone can suffer heatstroke or heat exhaustion, but infants, young children, the elderly and those with chronic illnesses are at the greatest risk. Symptoms include extreme thirst, rapid breathing and heartbeat, headache, nausea, vomiting, dizziness and fainting.

If heatstroke progresses to the point of confusion, dizziness or unconsciousness it is a medical emergency. If untreated, it can cause damage to the brain, heart, kidneys and muscles within hours.

It is important to ensure young children and babies are never left alone in a hot car or in direct sunlight, especially if they are too young to communicate their growing thirst or other signs of illness.

"Provide them with lots of liquids and opportunities to cool down," says King. "And call elderly neighbours and family members to check up on them frequently and make sure they are OK. We have to be diligent and protect each other."

Construction workers, landscapers and anyone else working vigorous jobs in the hot sun are also at risk. Give yourself some time to cool off while on the job, King advises, even if that means simply slipping into an air-conditioned gas station or convenience store.

It is also helpful to wear loose, light-coloured clothing and drink lots of water, even if you aren't thirsty. And it's never a bad idea to lather on the sunscreen, she says, but while the protective goop is a supplement, it is not a replacement for other cool-down measures.

"It's most important that people limit the time they spend in the sun," says King, citing that the sun is strongest between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Food safety and preparation: Foodborne illnesses increase in the summer, as bacterial microorganisms grow faster at temperatures between 32 and 43 degrees Celsius. Perishables can easily go bad and lead to food poisoning when left in the sun or a hot car for long periods of time, says King, so it is important to refrigerate food properly, particularly anything containing meat or dairy.

"Food safety is always an issue in the summer," she says, "and people have to be mindful when storing and preparing food at home. The key challenge is keeping cold food cold and not leaving food out any more than an hour on hot summer days."

Ice-packed coolers are a great way to keep food cold during a picnic or camping trip, just as long as you keep them closed as often as possible to keep the temperature down.

And if you have a doubt, it's safer to just throw it out.

Insect-borne disease: West Nile Virus does not meet its peak season until August.

"Right now we're urging people to keep mosquito counts down so we won't have a problem later on," she explains.

By early July last year, she says, there were 17 cases of West Nile reported in Ontario.

The ministry has been monitoring the mosquito population for West Nile since June, but they do not yet know all of the factors that cause a rise or decline in the proliferation of the virus.

The virus is transmitted through mosquitos that become infected by feeding on an infected bird.

Most people do not show any symptoms after being bitten by an infected mosquito, and those who do will often experience only mild headaches, fever, nausea, vomiting and rashes.

Medical help is still necessary if these symptoms occur, however, as in rare cases the virus can cause serious neurological illnesses, such as swelling of the brain called encephalitis.

Elderly people are most susceptible to the virus.

Mosquitos lay their eggs in warm, stagnant water, and will often stay close to the area in which they breed. Thus it's a good idea to ensure birdbaths, gutters and rain barrels are kept clean, that kids' wading pools are emptied after use and that tires are not left outside to accumulate water.

"You want to try to reduce the proliferation of mosquitos in your immediate area," says King.

Reads of the month

Book of the Month

The Golem and the Jinni by Helene Wecker

Set in 1899, in the vividly described city of New York, The Golem and the Jinni by Helene Wecker weaves together a story about identity, sense of place, and what it means to be an immigrant newly arrived and alone in a strange and foreign land. Made more poignant by her choice of protagonists, not only are the novel's central figures outsiders in a new country, but supernatural creatures trying to find their way. The first is a golem, who was created out of clay to be the wife of her master who died on their journey to America. Second, is a jinni, a being of fire, trapped for a thousand years in a copper flask before being released into a new time and place. Both struggle to belong, but ultimately must join together against a powerful threat, which challenges their very existence, and will force from them a fateful choice. The Golem and the Jinni is available to reserve from the Haliburton County Public Library today.

Junior Book of the Month

Otto the Book Bear by Katie Cleminson

Otto's a storybear, he lives in a book;
But the world's a big place, and he wants to have a look.
So onward he travels, having adventures great and small;
Until one day he discovers his book has gone AWOL.
Alone he must venture and seek out new lands;
Without compass or companion, will anyone lend a hand?
Who knows what's in store for this adventuresome traveler;
Maybe the Haliburton County Public Library will have the answer.

To reserve Otto the Book Bear and other delightful stories visit the Haliburton County Public Library today.

Local Celebrity Read

Taste of Home magazine

Molly McNerney of Molly's Bistro Bakery, which is located next to the Minden Branch of the Haliburton County Public Library at 170 Bobcaygeon Rd., recommends Taste of Home magazine. She says she enjoys reading this magazine because she is able to "find great ideas that I use in my menu at Molly's Bistro in each subscription. It has been a great inspiration for my daily specials, as well as catered foods." For example, one of Molly's favourite recipes that she's discovered inside of pages of Taste of Home is buffalo chicken lasagna, which is a part of her catering repertoire.

She especially loves that "all of their recipes are normal. They aren't too elaborate like some of those celebrity cookbooks. They are easy to replicate, and fun to experiment with." She feels that "reading Taste of Home opens a creative door, in which I am able to find ideas that I can grow or play around with."

Taste of Home is only one of the 47 magazines available to reserve from the Haliburton County Public Library. Any magazine from their eight branches can be reserved and sent to your branch of choice, where it can be checked out for a one week loan period.

For magazines to suit any mood visit the Haliburton County Public Library; and for fresh baked foods including amazing breakfasts, delicious lunches, and incredible baked goods visit Molly's Bistro Bakery, open seven days a week from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

News and Events

On Thursday, Aug. 15 at 12 p.m. The Friends of the Haliburton County Public Library will be hosting a Lunch and Learn event with author Robert Rotenberg, whose latest title Stranglehold has a grip on the holds list.

This event will be held at The Community Room on 13523 Hwy 118 in Haliburton and tickets are $20/person, which includes a buffet lunch, the presentation, and door prizes. For tickets call Heather at 705-447-2402.

A new partnership at the Dysart branch of the library is The Haliburton County Seed Library, a free community project, which encourages residents to grow some of their own food, to save their own seeds, and to share their seeds and knowledge with others.

On Monday, Aug. 12 from 6 to 8 p.m. come to the Dysart branch to learn about saving tomato seeds, and on Wednesday, Aug. 28 from 6 to 8 p.m. visit the branch to learn how to save difficult seeds.

We have summer children's programming running in five branches! Check our website at www.haliburtonlibrary.ca for details.

Faculty art auction coming up

Fleming College's Haliburton Campus will host the annual Haliburton School of The Arts Faculty Art Auction on Aug. 8.

There will be many unique works of art up for bidding in both live and silent auctions. All art has been created and generously donated by artists that are, or have been, members of the faculty at HSTA. In the past works have been donated by artists such as John Leonard, Rod Prouse, Rob Stimpson, John Willard, Susan Watson-Ellis, Sheila Mahut and Susan Fisher. All proceeds from the art auction are directed to bursaries and scholarships for students attending arts programs at the Haliburton campus.

"As a recipient of the Haliburton Friends of Fleming Scholarship I was able to further my education in the arts and explore my medium. I am enormously grateful for the help given to me by 'the Friends' which has been critical to pursuing my career in arts education," says Bryce Petersen, a glass-blowing certificate graduate and artist blacksmithing certificate graduate.

The event begins at 5 p.m. with a preview of the auction items. The live auction takes place at 7 p.m. A number of silent auction items will also be available to bid on throughout the event.

Admission is free and the auction is open to the public. The campus is located at 297 College Dr. in Haliburton. Guests are encouraged to arrive early to browse through the items and find a seat at the auction.

All auction purchases are payable by Visa, MasterCard, cash or cheque.

Fred Gardner (Resident of Halls Lake, Ontario)

Frederick Albert Gardner, December 1, 1931 – July 20, 2013. With a zest and a great love for life, Frederick Albert Gardner of Halls Lake passed away at Huntsville District Memorial Hospital on Saturday, July 20, 2013 in his 82nd year with his family by his side. Beloved husband of Ada Gardner. Predeceased by his loving son Russell Albert Gardner in March 2005. Dear father to Robert Gardner of Richmond, Virginia and Karen Stoneman of Burlington, Ontario. Wonderful and loving grandfather to Brittany Stoneman, Spencer Gardner, Delaney Stoneman and Richard Gardner. From a previous marriage he leaves behind his son, Tom Gardner of Minden with 3 grandchildren and daughter Nancy (Rick Lowes) of Halls Lake with 2 grandchildren. He is fondly remembered and will be sadly missed by his numerous nieces, nephews, family, and friends.

Harold Peter Priestman
Nov 19, 1925 – Jul 22, 2013

Pete died peacefully in Haliburton Hospital, surrounded by family, at age 87. He was predeceased by his brother Bob, sister in law Frances and survived by nephews Bob (Gail) and Bill (Jill), nieces Mary (Ken) and Barb (Oscar) as well as great nephews and nieces and their children. Pete had a singular zest for life, genuine love for people and his glass was always half full! In his initial career he worked with children and youth as Executive Director of both the East Hamilton and West Scarborough Boys' Clubs. Canoe tripping in northern Ontario with inner city kids was a highlight for Pete every year. His love of the great outdoors drew him to Wilberforce in 1976, where he operated The Terrace Inn on Dark Lake for 24 years. He then retired and moved to a house down the road, enjoying the fellowship of local friends and of family who bought cottages nearby. We will all miss his wonderful wit and lively discussions around the dinner table and campfires. A memorial service celebrating Pete's life will be held at ST MARGARET'S ANGLICAN CHURCH, Wilberforce, on Saturday, August 3rd at 4:00 pm. In honour of Pete, donations may be made to the Canadian Cancer Society. On line condolences at www.rskane.ca

TOTH, Sandor Leslie - It is with profound sadness that we announce the passing of Sandor after a short and courageous battle with cancer on Tuesday July 16, 2013 at Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay. Predeceased by parents; Alex and Norma Toth. Friend, Family, and Firefighter. Raised in Burlington and cottaging in his beloved Haliburton; Halls Lake, Maple Lake and Boshkung Lake. Sandor attended Nelson High School and Niagara College before becoming a firefighter for the Burlington Fire Department achieving his lifelong dream. Lovingly missed by his cherished and devoted "furbabies" Ledger and Shelby; friends; Melissa Joynt, Jeff Rock, Peter and Sue Hillar, Scott and Marla Miller, and many other friends. Visitation at the DODSWORTH & BROWN FUNERAL HOME, BURLINGTON CHAPEL, 2241 New Street (at Drury Lane), Burlington, 905-637-5233 was held on Friday July 19th from 5 - 8 p.m. and on Saturday July 20th from 11 a.m. - 1 p.m. A Funeral Service was held in the Chapel on Saturday July 20, 2013 at 1:00 p.m. Reception to follow. Private cremation. Donations in lieu of flowers can be made to the Burlington Animal Shelter and Ross Memorial Hospital, Palliative Care Unit.

Always a great event!
Recent Events
Best Ball Golf Tournament, held July 20 enjoyed great weather and a terrific turnout.
Considering the weather the night before and the need to cancel the spaghetti dinner due to a power failure, the golf tourney was a tremendous success.
The winning team came in at three under par. Team consisted of Mike McLeod, Larry Asselin, Bill Lagrandeur and Gord Hunt. Last place, but happy to be there, with a score of 11 over par were Ken Langford, Cindy Wind, Ted Langford and Daryl Lewis.

The Ladies Auxiliary provided a wonderful meal at the conclusion of the day and the fun continued with the presentation of awards complete with booing and cheering. Good fun for everyone.
